HAPPY WOMEN.

Wouldn't any woman be happy. After years of backache suffering, Days of misery, nights of unrest, The distress of urinary troubles, To find relief and cure? No reason why any reader Should suffer in the face of evidence like this:

Mrs. Almira A. Jackson, of East Front St., Traverse City, Mich., says: "For twenty years I was doctoring for kidney and liver trouble, but without benefit. Just before I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I was almost paralyzed. I could hardly stand on my feet because of the numbness and lack of circulation. Had a knife been thrust into my kidneys the pain could not have been more intense. My sleep was disturbed by visions of disfigurement. The kidney secretions were annoyingly irregular, and I was tortured with thirst and always bloated. I used seven boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The bloating subsided until I weighed 100 pounds less, could sleep like a child and was relieved of the pain and the irregularity of the kidney action. My circulation is good and I feel better in every way."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Jackson will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price, 50 cents per box.

The Hired Man That Was.

The old-time hired hand is gone. The one that used to work so much, "Workin' both his brain and brawn." Helped to cut and haul up hay; "Way up in the big red barn— Hot, but didn't care a darn. Kicked and raised a roar, Dumped a load and went for more. Tuck a personal interest, Always doing things the best. Broke the coil to ride and drive, Swarmed the bees into the hive. Was out in snows and rains and blows To see no little calf got froze. Come to butcherin' he was fine; Knew just how to fix the trim; Knew the way to ring the shoats, Knew the cure for cloyer bleats, Till it really seemed by ring. The hired man knew everything. At night he'd sit and talk and smoke, And many a tale and many a joke. He'd fit the bill's kettle and set it quacking and bang and boom. Just to 'prise and puzzle you. Old-time hired man is gone. And the kind you see to-day. Come at night and go at dawn; 'Work's too bloomin' hard," they say.

The Paragraph Pulpit.

BY EDWIN A. RUMBALL.
"If a man die, shall he live again?" We asked this question four weeks ago, and this week we give our last answer. What is it? Yes. Can I prove it? No. Have I any evidence? No. Do I believe it? No. Well how can I say that man is immortal if I do not believe it? My affirmation is not belief it is hope and hope only. The Bible never tells us we are saved by certainty, but it does say we are saved by hope. Hope is a persistent instinct and in all our most pessimistic forecasts for our selves it gives its under protest. Hope is no proof, only hope and like other hopes may be doomed to disappointment but it is the only relation we can legitimately take up towards immortality. Let this also be remembered that the hope is strongest in those who live best. It is fullness of life which strengthens the hope for the deathlessness of life. It is a life of good-will and pure thoughts that makes us think we are not made to die. Immortality is not a matter of but a fancy. It cannot be a matter of belief but only of faith. It does not belong to the realm of wakefulness, but the land of dreams. Though like a wanderer with the sun gone down, Darkened over me and my rest a stone; Yet in my dreams I would be Nearer my God to thee.

Fun Loving Characters—A Dusky Sweetheart—National Thanksgiving-Protest Guard-A Hand to Hand Fight—Wm. M.
Tweed of New York.

We had a few fellows in our Regiment who were always full of fun, and were of inestimable value to the rest of us just to brighten the days and keep us cheerful. Sam Patterson was a character who could furnish amusement by the yard.

I remember one little trick of his that always pleased me. Whenever he met a negro boy he would up with his middle finger and give him a tap on the head.

They soon learned what a sight of him and would not run a sight of him, but that was of no use. He would chase them until he came up with them and bring that middle finger down on top of their woolly heads to the delight of all spectators.

Then there was comrade Churchill, the singer, another fun-loving character who could make dancing tunes and steps to match them. His "Cuban fandango" (or damango, I've forgotten the word) danced with a plump and fat fellow to whom he had taught the steps, and an amusing performance. Churchill got smitten with a good looking girl out there, really to all appearances they were both smitten, a little dusky in complexion and her hair knipped; but their courtship made lots of fun for us, and it did us good to laugh.

We soon left the city and went into camp at Carrollton again. More than once our colonel has been called upon by some citizen to have the known or the 12th Regiment searched for stolen chickens. Of course our officers knew there would be no chickens found, but to satisfy the complainant the colonel would have the Regiment formed in line in proper order for inspection, front, rear, sides, which would lie on the ground in front with outside cover open for inspection by the officers as they passed down the lines. When the inspection was over the complainant would be informed by the colonel that his men were not the guilty parties, for no signs of any chickens could be seen.

A few days after our arrival at Carrollton our company was sent across the river to Fort Banks where we learned the heavy artillery drill. My position being that of gunner I soon became quite expert at hitting objects at a distance. A large pile of dry cedar rails somewhere between town and Liffers feet high, laid some distance away in one of the lanes, the lieutenant, thinking too far away for a hit, ordered me to try and see how near I could come to it. I gauged my gun for a hundred and fifty rods, took carefully, pulled the lanyard, and the big ball struck that pile of rails in the center, splinters and broken rails flew in all directions; but the most comical part of it was to see a negro who had been roosting on the opposite side running for home as fast as his legs would carry him, and the other negroes, who were pursuing him, flying one way and "rags, tags and bobtails" the other, as negro boys always looked when running.

While we stayed in Carrollton, Churchill's quip darling visited him frequently, crossing the river in a row-boat. She was quite devoted to him, but knew nothing of how strong a claim the German girl away up home in Pennsylvania had on him.

One time when they were standing in front of our quarters a little trouble arose between them that hurt her feelings so that she went "kerslop" on the ground where she sat a long time with great teardrops as big as buttons, chasing out other doer's tears. She was a handsome girl in form and feature but a little too dark to please many white men.

While we were at Fort Banks there came a National Thanksgiving day. pointed by President Lincoln, and the boys determined on its observance.

There had been other Thanksgivings Days since we entered the service but nothing for us in the way of good cheer.
We had our usual ration, a hard bread, salt beef or pork, and coffee of course.
Fifty or sixty meals like that would go very well, but it had been our steady diet for a long time and our "mouths watered" (as Bill Young said about the doughnuts fried in the grease) for a good old New England Thanksgiving dinner of turkey, cranberry sauce, vegetables, plum pudding, cheese and pumpkin pie.

Some of the boys concluded that if we couldn't have anything good to eat we had better have something to drink and make the day a merry one; and although only a few partook of anything extra on that occasion, those who did not enjoyed the festivities no less than those who did.

In the morning I was ordered to cross the river to Carrollton on some errand, and that gave an opportunity for those desiring to celebrate to send for what was needed; so they "chipped" the return sent the money required. The return trip was made without much delay (when a gallon jug of "Oh, be joyful") was delivered to the rightful owners.

The celebration commenced in a good natured way by toasting, exchanging jokes, telling stories, singing and creating fun generally. Comrade Chase was a good-natured, jolly chap from the Dead river region, who was unable to check his appetite for the contents of the Thanksgiving dinner, and before the day was gone had laid himself peacefully away as if in a sound sleep that nothing could disturb. And to end the day's frolic he was placed on an improvised stretcher and carried around the camp and the Dead March, and a file of soldiers marching in the rear with muskets reversed.

One evening Comrade Patterson and myself were invited to attend a "Cracker dance" in company with a young man and wife. The distance from camp was ten miles. The company present was well behaved and we were treated respectfully by both ladies and gentlemen.
The ladies' toilettes were not from Paris and some were even destitute of "hoops." The gentlemen were not in regulation evening costume, but they were good-natured and we enjoyed the evening.

Our stay at Fort Banks was not of long duration. Our captain was on furlough and the company was commanded by the Lieutenant, a kindly fellow when sober, but when under the influence of liquor he was a "terror," the worst acting man I ever saw. He was ordered to resign or receive a dishonorable discharge.

We rejoined our regiment at Carrollton in season to go with them to Lake Bogbe, and on our arrival there, myself and two other men were detailed for post, Provost Guard and ordered to duty without delay, to Capt. Stanford, who was acting as Provost Marshal of the Parishes Plaquemines and St. Bernard, the former being on the opposite side of the river. We arrived at the captain's office about dusk and were told commenced to prove which of us should have it to use, and who was to be the victim, for I think both realized that it was to be a fight for life.

The battle continued for some time with the chances about even, neither neither could get possession of that instrument of death. It seemed to me useless to prolong the twisting and wrenching for in physical strength he was fully my equal, so concluded to exercise a little of the science of wrestling and if possible land him in the ditch and kill him, as he would me if it lay in his power. The time soon came when a little play of cross-toe landed him in the ditch as quick as a flash, but he did not let go of the bayonet and although I had the advantage of being on top he held the bayonet away from him with such strength that I could not pierce his vitals. Failing that, I unclipped one hand from the bayonet and grasped his windpipe to his throat, but then his great strength served him, for he, too, let go of the bayonet with one hand and turned over on his face and arose to his feet, lifting me up on his back, and again the battle was resumed, with the determination on my part to conquer or die.

I had no fear of his wrenching the bayonet away from me, but thought I was working him for another cross-toe, but he didn't seem to realize it. It was some time before another chance occurred to try for it, but when it did, he found himself in the ditch again in the same shape as before. I tried with all my strength to get a grasp through his arm but he held me off and I found that game could not be worked, so grasped his windpipe again, which gave him the freedom of one hand and he began to struggle to regain his feet once more. It was evident that he was a very strong man, but his struggles lacked the force that they showed at first, yet he got on his feet again in spite of me, but before he got his balance I had him down again.
His next move was to begin to fall and I came a look of fear into his eyes. My next move was to grasp his windpipe with as near a vice-like grip as I could sustain with him struggling for his life.

There was too much building grit about him to give up and beg for mercy, so he kept up the struggle although the choking seemed at times almost to overcome him, and I expected every minute to feel his body grow limp in my hands, but soon found him not so near dead as he appeared, for with a sudden burst of strength he grasped my wrist and thrust it away from his throat, and with a terrible effort, rose to his feet and ran for his life. Knowing that he would have to stop to rest before going very far I hurried to quarters to get the two soldiers with guns to go with me and capture him. We had not gone very far in the direction that he had taken when we saw him, and he, at the same time, saw us approaching, started to run. Then I ordered Charles, the Irish boy, to shoot him, and as he was about to do so the guerrilla fell to the ground and surrendered. He was then taken across the river and turned over to the provost marshal. And I was glad to see the last of him on my side of the river.

Looking down the cross-road one day I saw the greatest turnout we had seen in that part of the country, a span of bay horses and a carryall with the driver seated up front. Following close behind was a man on horseback, and within the carriage sat a very well dressed portly gentleman who looked as if he considered himself to be a very important personage. We soldiers, all equipped, formed in line across the road and ordered the gentleman to halt, saying that he would have to pay a dollar for each man in his turnout before proceeding further.
That seemed to surprise him and he said in an important way:

"Do you know who I am?"
"I never saw you before," said I.
"I am Wm. H. Tweed of New York," said he.

We introduced ourselves as Uncle Sam's soldiers, and explained our business there, and without further demur he paid over the money and passed along to visit the old planter, Mr. Stackhouse, who was one of the wealthiest and most influential men of the Parish.
What Boss Tweed's business was down there with the Southern planters, we never found out, but presume it meant no good to our Government.

REMEDY FOR SEASICKNESS.

Meine Man Discovers Way to Cure It as Well as Seasickness.

Now that it is the season for travel, when nearly everyone takes at least a short water trip, here is a remedy for seasickness that is invaluable. It has been used by many travellers who invariably suffered from seasickness until they tried this remedy.

As soon as the vessel starts, take from fifteen to thirty drops of Neuralgic Anodyne in a little warm water sweetened, repeating the dose every thirty minutes until the stomach is settled and the nerves quieted. No matter how rough the ocean, or how the ship may roll and toss, Neuralgic Anodyne will give relief in seasick-ness.

This remedy is invaluable for all nerve aches or pains, curing neuralgia, headache, toothache, etc., when used externally. A large-sized bottle costs but 25 cts., and is sold everywhere, under guarantee to cost nothing unless it gives satisfaction. Made

As early as 1818 it was decided "to let neither the disputes of politics nor religion enter within the walls of the lodge," and the following year it was voted that the funds of Oxford Lodge be no longer appropriated to provide refreshments. In 1880 it was voted "that no ardent spirits shall be brought within the walls of this lodge for the use of its members."

Norway Board of Trade.

Some Things That It Has Done and More That It Will Do.

Do all the citizens of Norway realize what the board of trade is and what the Norway board has done and is doing for the general good of the village and town? If you will look back to 1903 when this board was first organized you will find many cases where it has been instrumental in bringing about certain things whereby the town has received substantial benefit. The most recent of these was the board's interest in getting the Novelty Turning company located here, which is now doing a good business and giving employment to a goodly number of people.

A year ago the need of more houses was felt by the business men for those employed in the shops and other places. The board of trade took the matter up, made the want known and agitated the matter and good results have followed. This is but a small part of what has been done and there is much more to do.

Two good things now receiving the attention of the board is the matter of better streets and to get them it looks as though the right thing to do at the start is to purchase a road roller. Suggestions are in order and all members should attend the meetings and talk the matter over.

Another thing is the painting of the telegraph and telegraph poles. They surely need it.

The neat well kept lawns and modern residences of our pretty village are not only a pride to its residents but receive the hearty commendation and praise of its many visitors. Should we not then take a just pride in maintaining of streets and other public utilities in a manner fully in keeping with the rest?

Get out to the board of trade meetings, interest your neighbors and friends and do your share for the public good.

SOUTH PARIS.
A Trip in the Canadian Wilds.

Flint Elder, who returned last week from a canoe trip on the Ottawa river; also visiting the Cobalt mining section, tells some interesting stories of his trip. Some portions of the section traveled was a vast area of woods and others very sparsely settled. They met a man who is hired by the government to travel through the woods to look after forest fires. He travels through the woods all the time and has a very unusual appearance, seldom meeting a human being. As they approached him he had his guns and revolvers in front of him in the canoe but when he found who they were he gave them a very cordial welcome, and one of the first questions he asked was "How did the Spanish-American war end?" Which shows how seldom he hears from the outside world. He was very anxious to talk and all sorts of questions and wanted them to stop much longer than they did.

The entire trip was full of interesting experiences but it is not an easy trip by any means. There are a good many places where they had to leave their canoe and baggage carried at some places for several miles.

William Deering.

Born in South Paris, Me., a Business Man in Portland, then the Multimillionaire Head of Great Harvest Machinery Company in Chicago.

When William Deering, at 16 years old, entered the little woolen mill in South Paris, where William Deering was born. When the son, at 18 years old, entered the establishment he was set at sorting wool. He received $8 and board a month—and saved some of it, too. He spent seven years in the growing establishment, which in those seven years took in a sawmill and a general store, the sawmill driven by the same water power that turned the spindles in the other plant. From wool sorting to the machinery plant—to the store department—William Deering, at 22 years old, to the agency of the factory, was the boy's progress.

When 23 years old he was married, and with Seth Milliken a few years later went to Portland, establishing the dry goods commission house of Deering, Milliken & Co., which is in existence today in New York under the old name, although years ago Mr. Deering sold out his interests to his partner. That sale is characteristic of Deering. He had heard the call of the West and had gone to see his partner. "What will you give me for my interests?" asked Deering. Milliken named the price after a moment's thought. "All right, I'll take it," replied Deering, and the half interest in a house that had been doing a business of several millions a year had changed hands. This was in 1865.

Had to Learn Own Business.
But Mr. Deering began to learn the ins and outs of the business in its early details, though never at any time in his life had he been anything approaching an expert in harvesting machinery. He had his business organization and he looked to its heads of departments for results in a merchantable product. He had a department of patents that was nourished as one of the vital integers of the organization. Any man who came to his head of departments with an idea he could express and a plan of work which he could outline with intelligent possibilities on the line of perfecting the automatic binder, could find a place on the salary roll of experimental department.

Fortune Spent for Patents.
"I have spent more money, by tens of thousands of dollars, than any other man in prospecting inventions and inventors in harvesting machinery," said Mr. Deering. "It was pioneering, too," he insists, "for the harvester led the way to the grain country of the northwest sixteen years ahead of the railroad." This pioneering of Mr. Deering's began in 1870, when he went to Chicago. Before the organization of the International company hundreds, perhaps thousands, of traveling salesmen were employed to get business. About this time the prices of steel went up and the price for labor advanced greatly. But in the life of the International company the prices for harvesters have remained nearly stationary. The farmer is paying little or no more for his self-binder than he paid before the formation of "the trust" as the farmer is pleased to call it. Steel is higher and labor is higher, but he gets his harvesting machinery at the old prices. It is only through the ability of the company to dispense with the costly salesman goods the old prices have been possible of maintenance.

Character Shown in Face.
One may read in the face of William Deering the individuality which was the father of the Deering fortunes. Now in his eightieth year, the strong face shows little the mark of time. His hair and beard are almost snow white, but the massive head on the broad shoulders of a man almost six feet tall, the firm mouth and chin, and the clear blue eyes all indicative of the individuality. Old friends characterize him as one of the keenest of business men, far sighted as to possibilities, and with the nerve to back his judgments.

"Yet he was always one of the easiest men in the world for a designing person to make a victim of," is the judgment of a man who knows him intimately. "He was brought up in the belief that every word he said was true. He is proved otherwise, and his faith in his kind has cost him dearly."

"Many are the men who had worked for the Deering interests faithfully and well who, at the close of a year's prosperous business, were approached by the old gentleman, who commented on that faithful service and at the end of the little speech slipped a check for no small amount into the hands of the man who had earned the words of praise. He is a man who always stood by his men who proved themselves."

Keeps Eye on Birds.
Plenty of men with a salary of $3,000 a year would scorn the architecture of the Deering cottage at Paw Paw lake, Michigan. There is neither gravelled drive or bordered path approaching it. The Deering "office" in the little cottage is at the rear of the house, entered from a back porch, and might have been designed for a pantry originally. When the writing table to a little desk is let down there is scarcely room for the two chairs in the room. But as we talked, the man of millions had eyes for out of doors through the door screen. He grasped my arm suddenly:

"Look! Look! There's a bummer bird," pointing into a tree near the porch railing: "That's the first one I've seen this year and the twentieth variety of bird that I've seen in the four years we've been up here."

"There's a red-headed wood-pecker there on the porch! There's a family of them nearby, and since I put out that bowl of nuts they've been loafing off me almost altogether!"

It was pleasant to hear the old gentleman talk of the birds he knew in the neighborhood and the fishing in the lake.

Gifts to Northwestern.
But kindness is one of the Deering traits. How much he has given to Northwestern university perhaps he does not know himself. But in the first years of his residence in Evanston he was made a trustee in that institution, and perhaps half a million dollars in the aggregate is under rather than over the Deering gifts.

First hall, built by him at a cost of $80,000 was named for one of the school's presidents only after all pressure brought to bear to have it called "Deering hall" had failed.

For a man twenty years beyond the allotted span of life there was a little note of the pathetic in his telling how he years ago became a resident of Evanston. The small daughter, Abby, seemed predisposed to the many small ills that attacked the school children of Chicago.

"We decided to move to Evanston on account of her health," he said. "She was our only daughter—she died last November."

Sorrow has come into the life of William Deering. His first wife was Abby Barbour of Maine, to whom he was married in 1849. The son of the union Charles Deering. The mother died soon afterward. Mr. Deering was married on Dec. 15, 1856, to Miss Clara Hamilton, and on December 16 last, celebrated the golden anniversary of the wedding. The two children of this union are James Deering and the little Abby, who died last year was the wife of Richard F. Rowe. The two sons and the son-in-law are active in the International Harvester company of the present day. [Chicago Tribune.]

The boys and girls are wondering where the summer has gone, too.

How to Find Health In Vegetables. Onions and radishes are preventives of colds and sore throat. Olive oil is much more healthful than meat fats for cooking, is easier on digestive organs, if you get it pure. To take a spoonful after a meal is recommended. In California invalids drink olive oil a cupful at a time.

This image is a vertical, high-contrast black and white scan of a document page that is severely damaged or degraded. The page is oriented vertically. A prominent, dark, irregular vertical band runs down the center, likely representing a deep crease, a stain, or a tear in the paper. The surrounding areas are light gray and heavily textured with noise and grain, characteristic of a poor-quality scan of an old or worn document. No legible text or identifiable figures are present.

L. W. Whitman of Paris had a pair girthing 7 ft. 1 in. They did good steady work and covered 41 ft.

The last pair belonged to F. W. Noyes of Norway the same pair that pulled in the 6 ft. 10 in. class, girth 6 ft. 10 in. They are great pullers, did steady work and pulled the load 67 ft. 7 in.

O. E. Turner had a pair entered, but did not pull.

First premium W. E. Tucker, second F. W. Noyes, third B. F. Glover.

Not stopping for dinner where the drawing was going on, it was past noon when the 7 ft. 2 in. class finished, but the sweepstakes were at once put on and the crowd was interested and many remained to witness the last oxen pulling of the pair. There were five entries in this class. Load 4894.

L. W. Whitman of West Paris with his pair girthing 7 ft. 1 in. did pretty pulling and went 55 ft. 2 in.

C. S. Hayes, Oxford, 98 ft. 5 in.

Moses Young, Hartford, two pair, one 87 ft. the other 35 ft. 7 in.

B. F. Glover, Hartford, 19 ft. 5 in.

R. K. Morrill, Norway, with his 2570 team did some good pulling, taking the load 86 ft. 1 in.

F. W. Noyes, Norway, with his pair weighing 2450 lb. handled the load as easily, but went 25 ft. 6 in.

Albert Richardson, about 3000 team of Norway, got down to business and went 97 ft.

Abner F. Jackson of Norway had the last pull with a team that weighed 3000 at Lewiston fair. After starting they went down the track at a good clip. They were heavily cheered by the crowd. They went 109 ft. 4 in.

First premium A. F. Jackson, second Albert Richardson, third W. C. Clifford.

Committee on horse drawing—Guy Curtis, Charles Freeman, Norway, Geo. Stevens, Waterville.

Town Teams.

Some pretty cattle were seen in the exhibitions of town teams and lots of them, too.

The Hartford string of oxen showed up in good style. These belonged to Moses Young, B. F. Glover and O. E. Turner.

In the Norway team George Abbott and sons had 3 pair, Frank Noyes, Alpheus Lovejoy, Gannon, Bros., Arthur Robbins and Frank Pike each had one pair.

Paris was represented by B. Y. Russell, L. W. Whitman, J. C. Howe, D. P. Curtis, A. E. Morse, L. W. Foster, J. A. Starrevant and L. F. Everett who had one pair each.

In the 3-year-old class Norway and Paris were both well represented.

The town teams of horses made an excellent showing. Some handsome specimens of horses were seen.

The Norway team was owned by the following: Frank Noyes, 2500 pair; Albert Richardson, 3000; Chas. Freeman, 2 pair, 2500 and 3000; Anson Millett, 2700; A. F. Jackson, 3100; R. K. Morrill, 2 pair, 2500 and 2250; Eugene Millett, 2600; J. S. and J. H. Millett, 2324; U. S. G. Abbott, 2450; W. F. Young, 2300; John T. Austin, 2500; V. E. Dunn, 2300; Frank Noyes, 2600; C. W. Buck, 2400; Gene Millett, 2500; Bay Mills, one pair.

Norway had two teams exhibited, but it was not decided at this time whether two premiums could be given to one town or not.

The Paris team was made up as follows: Chas. Gowell, 2280; Richard Gates, 2303; Thayer Bros., 2450; Scott Colby, 2400; Chas. Young, 2300; A. W. Walker, 2800; W. K. Clifford, 3000; Paris Mfg. Co., 3000.

A large crowd surveyed the exhibition and many words of admiration were spoken for the good showing of cattle and horses.

Their presents were beautiful and many, consisting of table linen, silver and glassware, china, pictures and money. The best wishes for happiness from their many friends attend them.

Isaac Jordan has been in the place, visiting old neighbors and friends.

K. Hill is building a new ice house. Walter Whitman is helping him.

Hattie and Ellen Barcoe of Westbrook recently were the guests of Mrs. Daniel Brett and Ella Meserve for a few days.

Cataract is Curable.

Successful Experiments in Abating and Curing This Disease.

Cataract is an entirely unnecessary disease and should not be tolerated for a single day now that Hyomei is so general in Norway and has made so many cures.

Until comparatively recent times cataract was thought to be a blood disease and stomach dosing the only treatment. Modern science finally disproved this idea and it was found that cataract, and found many experiments, the remedy was, after all, to be Hyomei.

Hyomei medicates the air you breathe; it smokes the cataractal germs; it heats the passages in the nose and throat; it cures all the cataractal troubles.

As there is life and health in the air in the mountain-tops where the pine forests give off their fragrant and healing balsam, so there is life and health in breathing Hyomei. There is no need of natural treatment of Hyomei is used.

So sure is this prescription to cure over the worst cases of cataract, that Dr. Kimball, proprietor of the Noyes Drug Store, sells it under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it does not do all that is claimed for it.
